Rheinmetall wins multi-year service contract from an international customer – services in the higher double-digit million euro range

Rheinmetall has received a significant service contract from an international customer. The contract is set to run for five years and is worth a high double-digit million euro amount.

Between 2022 and 2027, Rheinmetall will supply the customer with spare parts for its air defence systems in use, carry out repairs and provide maintenance support. This contract continues a business relationship that has been successful for decades.

As an international systems supplier, Rheinmetall not only has extensive expertise in the development and manufacture of modern products and systems. The company can also support and modernise them throughout their entire service life. In doing so, Rheinmetall can integrate the armed forces and industry of the customer countries in order to contribute to the preservation of key national capabilities.
